AMUSEMENTS.

All indications point to a good start toward the new season, for the Grand Opera House threw open its doors last night and a large crowd witnessed the initial performance, showing the great popularity of the Murray Comedy Company. The bill last night was "Nature's Nobleman" and it proved a strong opening attraction. The weather conditions were all that could be desired and everybody, hungry for the play, after a long summer, thoroughly enjoyed the performance. The Murray Comedy Company are old favorites in this city and always make good their promises and we may look forward to a week of good repertoire. A change of programme will be given nightly, with specialties of a high order given between the acts each evening.

To-night, will be presented, "Two Friends." Specialties will be introduced by Miss Alice Hamilton, W. F. Blakemore, Fred LeCompte, The Kentucky Quartette, Illustrated Songs and Zizadrome.

A matinee will be given on Saturday at 2 p. m., for the children, with gorgeous scenic and electrical effects.

Following the Murray Comedy Company, the next attraction at the Grand, in this city, will be the "Who, What, When" Minstrels. Their date is Friday, Sept. 5th.

The three requisites for a perfect theatrical performance are, first "a perfect play," second, "a complete production," third, "a company of players of such diversified talent as to thoroughly assume and enact the various types of life represented in the play." All of these essentials Manager Wm. A. Brady is said to have provided in "Way Down East" which comes to the Opera House this season.

Frank L. Perley is fortunate in having secured Effie Ellsler as his star in "When Knighthood Was In Flower." Miss Ellsler's support will be the strongest this favorite emotional artist has ever had.

STOCK AND CROP.

McIntyre & McClintock shipped 2,100 lambs East, 93 hogs to Cincinnati last week and sold to Judy Smith, of North Middletown, thirty-three 1,025-lb. feeders, at 5 cents.

The grain rate from Canada to Liverpool is 1 1/2 cents a bushel cheaper than by way of New York, and in consequence, Canadian shipment exceed those from American ports.

Said the grocery man to the butcher man: "It really is a sin that you could buy your salt on the wholesale plan and not let me handle the tin," then he hid himself back to the grocery store and quickly sent for a few choice hams for family use and a box of fish for Lent. Said the clothing man to the hardware man: "You certainly don't do right when you order a suit from an eastern firm with my stock in sight." But the clothier wanted a new steel range and it came, the neighbors know, in a box he tried to hide in the barn marked Sears, Roebuck & Co. The business man called a meeting to see where the trouble lay; and they all agreed that 'twas the editor and devil to pay. "Why don't we roast the department stores and peddling fakes," they said, "and stand by him who gave him his daily bread?" So they drew up a protest long and strong for the editor to peruse and waited on him with aspect grim as he solemnly dug for news. But the editor laughed till the whole gang took to the woods—as it was written on Axle Grease letter heads that came with a bill of goods. Moral: Patronize home merchants.—Exchange.

TAFT REACHES MANILA

The Civil Governor Was Given a Rousing Reception.

Eight Large Arches Erected and 20,000 Natives From Neighboring Provinces Participated in the Demonstrations.

Manila, Aug. 23.—Civil Gov. Taft reached here Friday morning at daylight on board the United States gunboat Gen. Alava from Singapore, Straits Settlement. He was welcomed with an enthusiastic popular demonstration.

Manila, Aug. 23.—The day had been made a holiday and the city was decorated. Eight large arches had been erected on the streets. Twenty thousand natives from adjoining provinces participated in the demonstrations in honor of the governor's arrival. There was a parade of vessels in the bay and 30 decorated craft carrying members of the civil commission, military officers and the reception committee, met the Gen. Alava down the bay and escorted Gov. Taft to the entrance of the Pasig river. The governor was escorted by a large procession to the palace in the walled city where a public reception was held.

Responding to an address of welcome, Gov. Taft outlined the progress and the result of his negotiations at Rome in the matter of the Philippine friars, and said that all church questions were progressing toward a satisfactory settlement. The governor said the action taken by congress concerning the Philippine islands showed that the American people honestly desired to help the Filipinos. The Americans were determined the islands should not be exploited by Americans at the expense of the Filipinos. Gov. Taft predicted that eventually the archipelago would have practically free trade, and he congratulated the Filipino people upon the restoration of peace. He advised the Filipinos to till the soil and restore their country rather than waste time in useless political agitation. He promised personally to labor for the natives and asked for their confidence and support.

Gov. Taft was given an ovation on the streets of the city during his progress to the palace and he received another ovation at his reception.

Manila, Aug. 23.—Gen. Chaffee returned to Manila Friday from his tour of the southern islands. He has not taken decisive action against the Moros of the island of Mindanao. He regards the situation there as uncertain but not critical.

Higginson, the respective commanders of land and sea forces, at their recent Newport conference, have reached Washington, and the instructions which will be issued by the two branches of the service to the opponents in the war game will be prepared here. These instructions will be of the same character as those which were issued to the commanders of the white and blue squadrons which are vying with each other off the New England coast. Later on, when the joint maneuvers begin, the character of the problem, as worked out by the war board, together with the instructions and the rules governing the contest, will be made public.

A TERRIFIC CRASH.

One Killed and 20 Injured in a Trolley Car Accident.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 23.—A cable car crowded with passengers got away from the gripman at the top of the Ninth street incline at the Union Station here and dashing to the bottom at a terrific speed crashed into a train that was stalled there. The passengers were hurled in every direction and the grip car on the runaway train were reduced to a mass of twisted iron and splinters.

W. B. Taylor, the gripman on the first train, was instantly killed and at least 20 persons were injured.

The incline, which has been the scene of several fatal accidents, is 300 yards in length and descends at an angle of 45 degrees to an elevated platform.

A grip car and one coach at the bottom of the incline was being switched to the opposite track, preparatory to the climb back to town. Before this could be accomplished, dozens of persons crowded into the train. In another minute a train appeared at the top of the hill, heavily laden with passengers. The gripman had lost control of his car, and in another instant 80 passengers were being hurled down the steep hillside. A panic ensued both on the descending car and among the crowd below. On the platform in the scramble to escape many were trampled upon and several persons fainted, while a score of passengers on the runaway train jumped from the sides of the cars rolling over and over on the trestle work. The train struck the switching cars with a terrific crash, rendering the waiting train a mass of debris. Gripman Taylor was found dead, buried under the wreckage, while two dozen persons sprawled about. Half of the injured were only stunned or bruised.

Six suffering from broken limbs, bad cuts and internal injuries were taken to nearby hotels, while a score of others, cut and bruised, were taken to their homes.

The engineers get an increase of pay on the large freight and passenger engines. On local freights the men are paid on a daily basis. The men on the short or mixed passenger and freight runs were also given an increase.

Her record for the voyage is six days, 13 hours and five minutes.

THE MIMIC WAR ENDED

White Squadron Defeated By the Blue Squadron.

An Incident in One of the Most Interesting Chapters in the Peace History of the United States Navy.

Rockport, Mass., Aug. 23.—The naval search problem on the New England coast was terminated at 5:40 Sunday morning by the signal "Surrender; demand an unconditional" from R. Adm. Higginson's flagship, and the reply "Accept surrender" from the fore truck of the Prairie, Commander Pillsbury's flagship. The battle between the blue, or defending squadron, and the white, or attacking squadron, was thus quickly ended eight miles south of Thatcher's island. The enemy had most signally failed to make a harbor, having for its object Salem. A preponderance of fighting strength, relatively 64 points, represented by the battleships Kearsarge, Alabama and Massachusetts, Scorpion and a torpedo boat, had overwhelmed the 45 points represented by the auxiliary cruisers Prairie, Panther and Supply. To speak from a theoretic standpoint the white squadron was entirely destroyed by the guns of the defending battleships. Thus on the fourth night the game of naval strategy was brought to an end, it having covered a period of unceasing and sleepless nights of anxious and wearying vigil and of grave uncertainty to its participants.

The destruction of Pillsbury's squadron occurred at a point just within the outer limit of Gloucester harbor not over eight miles southerly from Thatcher's island, off which had been anchored since Wednesday when the war game was declared opened the three powerful battleships of the blue squadron.

The surrounding and "putting out of action" of the squadron in command of Commander Pillsbury was the culminating incident in one of the most interesting chapters in the peace history of the American navy. For the placing in operation of the maneuvers of the warships off the coast of New England the navy had long prepared itself and had long looked forward with keen anticipation. As planned by the naval authorities at Washington, two squadrons were to be put into the game, one the blue, the defending fleet, and the other the white, to be a hostile fleet, bent upon effecting an anchorage in some unprotected harbor on the coast from Cape Elizabeth to Cape Cod, opposed all the time by the first named fleet. This anchorage had to be maintained against the defenders for a period of six hours. Commander Pillsbury's white squadron consisted of the auxiliary cruisers Prairie (flagship), Panther and Supply. The two former boats were each assigned 20 points of fighting strength, while the Supply was assumed to represent five points. Adm. Higginson's fleet was actually superior in the number of its members and by the same arrangements made as to the Pillsbury ships it represented a grand total of 97 points of strength.

The Kearsarge, the Alabama and the Massachusetts battleships were given 20, the cruisers Brooklyn and Olympia eight each, the Cincinnati and Montgomery, Gloucester, Mayflower and Scorpion three points each, while a number of torpedo boats made up the remaining numbers. To win in the mimic war the blue squadron had to bring against the attacking vessels, as it did early Sunday, warships superior in their combined assumed fighting power. Each side had the right to capture individual craft of the other fleet by overcoming them in point of strength and under the rules of the game the captured vessels were to retire altogether from the field of action.

In the defeat of Pillsbury, the defense, with three battleships, the Scorpion and with a single torpedo boat, had 64 points, so that the balance was against the attacking squadron. Throughout the mimic war there was placed in operation a system of coast defense which was admittedly of credit to those who were engaged in it.

Chief Old Bull Dead.

Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 23.—Old Bull, an Omaha Indian chief, who was a survivor of the wars waged against the Indians by Gen. Custer, is dead at the Arapahoe Indian agency at Culy, Okla. Ambassador De Stael to Retire.

Thos. Garrett's Fatal Laugh.

St. Joseph, Mich., Aug. 23.—During a fit of laughter Thomas C. Garrett, aged 27, a drug clerk from Chicago, lost his balance, fell out of a boat and was drowned. The body was recovered in 15 minutes, but life was extinct.

Washington, Aug. 25.—Rev. Robert Nourse, Congregational minister and lecturer, was stricken with heart failure while in the pulpit of the First Congregational church Sunday. He is somewhat better.

RACES RIOTING.

Bloody Battle Between Whites and Blacks at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 25.—A race riot here broke out at Haughville, a suburb of this city, Sunday between 200 Negroes and whites employed by the National Malleable Casting Co. There has been bitter race feeling between them for several years and trouble has frequently broken out. Two people have already been killed. A ball game Sunday morning between the two factions caused excitement. As the crowd left the field hostilities broke out. Stones, bricks, clubs and other missiles were used. Two hundred persons were immediately crushed together in a fighting mass. Twelve or fifteen shots were fired and it is reported that one Negro was shot, but he was slipped from the field before the police arrived. The whites were victorious, driving the blacks from the field and wounding a number of them. Several white people were badly injured. Ten arrests have been made and others will be made as rapidly as the persons are found. The police responded to a riot call but on account of the distance did not arrive till the fight had been fought to a finish. Officers of the company fear other outbreaks will follow.

NINETY-EIGHTH MERIDIAN.

New Survey Places It Four and a Fraction Miles East of Present Line.

Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 25.—Advices from Washington to the territorial officers state that the interior department has approved the Johnson and Kidder survey of the 98th meridian, which places it four and a fraction miles east of the present boundary between Oklahoma and the Chickasaw Nation, Indian territory thus adding to Oklahoma the city of Chickasha, the most important commercial and railroad point in that part of the south-west. A long drawn out legal battle is expected to follow this decision and the matter must ultimately be passed upon by the United States supreme court.

Seventy constabulary have taken the field in pursuit of the Ladrones.

Cholera in the Philippines.

Manila, Aug. 25.—Official cholera statistics show a total up to date of 25,664 cases and 18,040 deaths. The actual number of cases and deaths is greatly in excess of the official reports. In Manila there were but eight cases reported last Saturday. In some of the provinces of Luzon the cholera situation is bad, 414 cases and 317 deaths were reported from the province of Ilocos Norte last Saturday.

He found the house filled with escaping gas and his wife and children, one a girl of two years, and the other an infant, dead. WENT OVER TRESTLE.

Three Killed and Two Badly Hurt Near Georgetown, Ind.

Trains Collided on the Trestle, Cars Piling on the Locomotives, and a Ravine Below.

New Albany, Ind., Aug. 25.—In a freight wreck on the Southern railway, near Georgetown, ten miles west of here, early Sunday, Engineer "Red" Duval, Fireman B. Cox and Brakeman Ross, of one train, were killed outright, and Engineer Harry Goodall and Fireman George Myers, of the other train, were probably fatally hurt. Fourteen box cars loaded with wheat together with two locomotives were tumbled over a trestle to a ravine 40 feet below and were demolished. All the traffic on the southern railway between Louisville and St. Louis has been blocked all day. Two sections of the through freight were coming east and the first section, in charge of Conductor Walter Alvis, had stopped at Duncans to switch, leaving a "cut" of cars on the main track. There is a heavy grade at this point, and by some means the cars broke away and rolled down the track, gaining momentum at each revolution of the wheels. Just as the runaway cars were approaching the trestle, the second section, drawn by two big moguls, came thundering over the hill, and the crash occurred a moment later. The cars piled over the locomotives and all went down into the ravine in a heap. Both Duval and Cox went down with their locomotive. Ross was on one of the runaway cars and was crushed beneath it. Engineer Goodall and Fireman Myers, in charge of the other locomotive, jumped and saved their lives, although they may yet die.

Conductor A. G. Lewis and Brakeman John Burns, of the second section, jumped and escaped serious injury. Duval's body was taken to his home in Louisville, and that of Ross was sent to Milltown, Ind., his home. Cox's remains were sent to Princeton, where his relatives reside. Duval had been married but a few days ago. The loss to the railroad company will amount to about $75,000.

Engineers Goodall and Duval, Fireman Cox, Brakeman Ross and Myers were buried in the debris. There was great difficulty in extricating Myers; his voice could be heard for hours before he was removed. Cox, Ross and Duval were dead when found. Goodall's right shoulder and head were badly smashed. Brakeman Osburn was supposed to have been on the cut-off cars. But little can be gained from officials at the division here. The wrecking train went to the scene of the collision loaded with timbers to rebuild the trestle. Mrs. Goodall, wife of the engineer, was taken to Georgetown on one of the specials. Traffic east of Huntington has been suspended. All trains ran from Huntington over the Evansville branch thence to Louisville over the Henderson route. From all reports this is the worst wreck on the division in many years. It is necessary to use two locomotives for freight trains in order to get over the hill at this point. A gloom has been cast over Princeton.

HEAD ON COLLISION.

Three People Killed and Many Badly Injured Near Norfolk, Va.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 25.—In a head-on collision between two cars on the Bay Shore Terminal line late Sunday three people were killed and many others badly injured.

The accident occurred about three and one-half miles from Norfolk. One car was coming from Ocean View and the other going to the View. The orders were that the south-bound car should wait at the siding for the other. Motorman W. S. Randall failed to obey the orders and the crash came 400 yards beyond the siding. Randall endeavored to jump, but was crushed in the telescoped cars. Motorman C. D. Colden, of the other car, applied his air brakes as soon as he saw the danger, the collision occurring on a curve, and then tried to jump, as did Linwood Pentress, son of R. B. Pentress, president of the Norfolk Cold Storage & Ice Co. Both Colden and Young Pentress were caught under the platform of the shore-bound car, which piled upon the other, and were killed outright. Both cars were full of Sunday excursionists and few escaped injury.

"DEAR OLD MOTHER AND ME."

"We lived in a cottage, years ago,
A cottage down by the sea,
There were only two of us living there,
Just dear old mother and me.

Daddy had gone on his last long cruise,
And Biddle was off at sea,
"Sis" was married, and so there were left
Just dear old mother and me.

The home was plain, but then it was "Home,"
And a living we got from the sea;
We were happy together, I want you to know,
Just dear old mother and me.

But, an end must come to sorrow or joy,
And so, like a storm on the sea,
A shadow passed over the house where lived
Just dear old mother and me.

A beautiful boat appeared, one night,
And anchored off shore, at sea;
At dawn it sailed, and carried away
My dear old mother from me.

And now, a lone watch each night I keep,
Looking out toward the sea;
Hoping, some day that boat will return
With dear old mother, for me.

But no, a boat I must prepare,
For a cruise on the Crystal sea,
A beautiful trip, to last away
For dear old mother and me.

A Knave of Conscience

By FRANCIS LYNDE.

"By Jove! but she is a magnificent strong type," he mused, lying flat on his back and staring absently at the glittering shadows among the deck beams overhead. "Her face is as readable as only the face of a woman instinctively good and pure in heart can be. Any man who can put her between the covers of a book may put anything else he pleases in it and snap his fingers at the world. If I am going to live in the same town with her I ought to jot her down in words before I lose the keen edge of the first impression."

He considered it for a moment, and then got up and went in quest of a pencil and a scrap of paper. The dozing night clerk gave him both, with a sleepy malediction thrown in; and he went back to his engine-room and scribbled his word-picture by the light of the swinging lantern, thus:

"Character-study: Young woman of the type Western-Creole—not the daughter of aliens, but born in the West of parents who have migrated from one of the older States. (I'll hazard that much as a guess.) Details: Titian blonde, with hair like spun bronze; the complexion that neither freckles nor tans; cool, gray eyes with an under-depth in them that no man but her lover may ever quite fathom; a figure which would be statuesque if it were not altogether human and womanly; features cast in the Puritan mold, with the lines of character well emphasized; lips that would be passionate but for—no, lips that will be passionate when the hour and the man arrive. A soul strong in the strength of purity, which would send her to the stake for a principle, or to the Isle of Lepers with her lover. A typical heroine for a story in which the hero is a man who might need to borrow a conscience."

He read it over thoughtfully when it was finished, changing a word here and a phrase there with a craftsman's fidelity to the exactness. Then he shook his head regretfully and tore the scrap of paper into tiny squares, scattering them upon the brown flood surging past the engine-room gangway.

"It won't do," he confessed, reluctantly, as one who sacrifices good literary material to an overweighing sense of the fitness of things. "It's nothing less than cold-blooded sacrilege. I can't make copy out of her if I write no more while the world stands."

CHAPTER VI.

Charlotte Farnham's friends were wont to say of her that she was as sensible as she was beautiful. She was, as Griswold had guessed, of New England lineage. Her parents had migrated for the health of the wife, but the migration had been postponed too long. The mother died in the early Minnesota days, but the daughter lived to grow up unspoiled and beautiful.

She had been spending the winter at Pass Christian with her aunt, who was an invalid; and for the invalid's sake the return passage was taken on the "Belle Julie." On the morning of the second day out, when the New Orleans papers came aboard, the two of them were sitting in the shade of the hurricane deck aft. Charlotte bought a paper and read the account of the bank robbery with a little gasp of belated horror.

"What is it, Charlotte?" asked the invalid.

Charlotte read the reporter's story. "Dear me! How shockingly bold!" commented Miss Gilman.

"Yes; but that wasn't what made me gasp. The paper says: 'A young lady was at the teller's window—Aunt Fanny, I was the young lady.' 'You? Horrors!' ejaculated the invalid.

"It's true. And I had no more idea—why, it seems incredible."

"I should think it would."

"There wasn't anything about it to suggest a robbery," Charlotte went on. "The man was smiling, and he had a good face—a face that one would trust almost intuitively."

"Charlotte!" exclaimed her aunt. "I do hope they can't trace you up your father's draft."

"What if they could?"

"Don't you see? You'd be dragged into court to identify the robber. And that would be simply dreadful."

"I shouldn't want to be dragged. It would be a simple duty to go willingly. More than that, I think I ought to write to Mr. Galbraith and give him my name and address."

But at this the invalid protested with what authority there was in her, and Charlotte agreed finally to wait until the matter of duty had been submitted to her father.

Here the subject was dropped, and Charlotte went to her stateroom to get a book for herself and a magazine for the invalid. It was a full hour later, and Miss Gilman was deep in the last installment of the magazine serial, when Charlotte gave up the struggle with the book. Do what she could, the scene in the bank would thrust itself between; and at length she let the thought have its will of her.

From where she was sitting she could see the steamer's yawl swinging from its tackle on the stern-staff. In the midst of the reminiscence thought, she saw that the ropes were working loose; that the yawl would presently fall. When she rose to go and tell some one, a man came aft to make the tackle fast, and she stepped aside to let him pass.

It was Griswold. She saw his face as he passed, and there was something strangely familiar in it. When he had fastened the rope and was returning, she had a fair look at him and for an instant was fain to grip the back of her chair to keep from crying out. For in that instant she recognized him.

Now, this young woman was wise beyond her years, and she knew what she had to do. None the less, she was a true woman, with a heart full of tenderness and pity. So it is not wonderful that for a moment conscience turned traitor, and was dumb. But it was only for a moment. The simple and obvious thing to do was to go at once and tell the captain what she had discovered; and she was deterred from so doing only by the reflection that a less terrible alternative would be the sending of a letter to the New Orleans bank people.

This she determined upon, telling her aunt nothing of her discovery, but merely saying that upon second thought she felt that she must write to Mr. Galbraith at once. Miss Gilman withdrew her objections reluctantly.

"If you must, Charlotte. But it seems like a very dreadful thing for you to have to do."

"It is very dreadful," said Charlotte, with a sob in her voice. Nevertheless, she went away quickly to write the letter which should set the machinery of the law in motion.

CHAPTER VII.

In yielding to the impulse of the moment which prompted him to borrow the identity of John Gavitt, Griswold was not without some forebodings of the event. He knew that the river steamers were manned by pick-up crews assembled at the last moment, and reasoned that the officers of the "Belle Julie" would not yet have had time to individualize the members of the crew.

HE LIFTED HIM BODILY.

But, apart from this, he was not unwilling to add another chapter to his experience among the toilers; and as to this, he immediately found himself in a fair way to acquire the coveted meed of it. From the hour of his enlistment, it was heaped upon him unstintingly. Without having specialized himself in any way to the bullying chief mate, he fancied he was made to bear the brunt of the man's wrath. Curses, tongue-lashings without mercy; contumely and abuse, with now and then at the night landings, when no passengers were looking on, blows.

All these buffetings, or at least his share of them, Griswold endured as became a man who had voluntarily put himself in the way of such things. And, fortunately, he was not hopelessly unequal to the physical trial. Physically, as intellectually, the material in him was of the fine-grained sort in which quality counts for more than quantity. None the less, the first night with its uncounted plantation landings, tried him sorely, and he was thankful when the second day brought fewer stopping-places and more time for rest.

It was in one of the restful intervals that he had been sent aft to readjust the tackle of the suspended yawl. He had come upon Miss Farnham and her aunt unexpectedly, and so was off his guard; and he made sure the young woman had recognized him. If so, what would she do? He recalled his written summary of her character, and decided that she would be sexless and just before she would be womanly and merciful. At least, he hoped she would. Ideals are much too precious to be shattered by mere considerations of personal safety.

But while he theorized upon the probabilities, he was fully alive to the necessity for prompt action. If Miss Farnham had discovered him, she would doubtless lose no time in giving the alarm. She might even now be in conference with the captain, he thought.

At this he had his first shock of genuine terror. Up to that moment he had suffered none of the pains of the hunted fugitive; but now he knew that he had fairly entered the gates of the outlaw's inferno; that he should never again know what it was to be wholly free from the terror of the arrow that flieth by day.

The force of the Scriptural simile came to him with startling emphasis, bringing on a return of the prickling paralysis of fear; but he shook it off and ran aft to rummage under the cargo for his precious bundle. For the whistle was sounding for a landing, and it was high time that he was afoot and fleeing. But when his hand reached the place where the bundle should have been, the blood surged to his brain and set up a clamorous dinning in his ears. The niche under the coffee sacks was empty.

CHAPTER VIII.

While Griswold was grappling afresh with the problems of escape, Charlotte was sitting behind the locked door of her stateroom, trying to write her letter.

She knew it would be hard, but it proved much harder than she had feared it would be. Try as she might, she could not eliminate the factor of personality. Truly, this man was no more to her than any stranger in the passing show, an impersonal unit of a class with which society is at war; and yet, at the end of every effort, the point of view shifted, and in the whole world there were but two persons; a man who had sinned, and a woman who was about to make him pay the penalty.

Nevertheless, conscience was not to be denied; and after many futile beginnings, the fateful letter got itself written, and she went out to mail it at the office. As it happened, the "Belle Julie" was slowing for a landing, and the office was closed. And since she would by no means entrust the letter to the outside mail box, she waited till the clerk should return.

The doors giving upon the saloon deck forward were open, and she stepped out. The crew was grouped about the uptilted landing-stage, and he was there—this man for whose future she was about to become answerable.

One glimpse of his face, haggard and woebegone beyond any imaginings of hers, slew her resolve on the eve of its accomplishment, and she turned and ran back to the stateroom, saying over and over to herself as she fled: "Oh, I can't! I can't!—and yet I must!"

It was noon before she opened her door again at the luncheon call, and went aft to bring her aunt to the table. What she had endured in the interval, none might know; not even the sympathetic invalid, who more than once looked askance at the troubled eyes with their downcast lids.

At their end of the table, the talk rippled about the bank robbery; and when Capt. Mayfield mentioned the fact of the $10,000 reward which had been offered, Charlotte was moved to say:

"That seems dreadfully barbarous—to set a price on the head of a human being."

A gentleman across the table took it up.

"But, Miss Farnham, would you have us turn tight-catchers for the mere honor of it?"

"For the love of justice, or not at all," she rejoined.

The gentleman demurred and went into details to prove his position; and the details only served to affront Charlotte's sense of the fitness of things.

"Do you mean to say that you would accept the reward, Mr. Latrobe?" she asked.

"Certainly I should; anyone would."

She knew the frank admission stood for public opinion, and went dumb. She might call the reward blood-money and refuse to touch it, but only those of her own circle would know and believe the truth. And the wretched man himself would always believe that she had sold him for a price.

That evening, after dinner, she sought the captain to ask a question.

"Do you know the law in Louisiana, Capt. Mayfield? This man who robbed the bank; what would his penalty be?"

"I don't know, precisely. Twenty years in the chain-gang, I should say."

The "Belle Julie" was pausing at a small hamlet on the west bank of the river, and the captain pointed to a squad of prisoners in chains, repairing a breach in the levee.

"That's where he'll land when they catch him," he added. "He'll have to be pretty tough to outlive his sentence."

CHAPTER IX.

In any conflict between duty and inclination it is only the final step which is irrevocable; and in Charlotte's case this step was the mailing of her letter. All through the long afternoon she had tried vainly to screw her courage to the sticking point, and had failed. But when she went to bed with the thought that she would surely do it in the morning, she had overlooked the fact that an outraged conscience fights best in the night watches.

That was why she had to get up at midnight and dress, and go out to have the dreadful thing over with before ever sleep would come, if haply it might come then.

But once again fate intervened.

While she was hurriedly dressing, the whistle sounded for a landing; and when she reached the office, it was again closed. As before, she stepped out on the saloon deck to wait. The great electric searchlight just over her head made the landing as light as day, and when she reached the rail the landing-stage was just coming aboard for the departure.

Two men whose duty it was to cast off ran out on the tilting platform and dropped to the ground. One of them fell clumsily; but the other ran up the bank and loosened the mooring line. The steamer began to swing off, and the man ran back to his companion, who seemed to be unable to rise.

"Get a move on youse!" bellowed the mate.

Then Charlotte saw that the fallen man was disabled in some way, and that the other was trying to lift him. The mate swore out of a full heart.

"Come aboard, or I'll skin ye alive, ye skunk!"

Char! Je put her fingers in her ears to shut out the clamor of profanity; but the man on the bank was deaf to it. Running to the mooring-post, he took a turn of the line around it, and snubbed the steamer's bow back to the bank. Then, casting off, he darted back to the disabled one, lifted him bodily to the guard, and climbed aboard himself.

Charlotte held her breath while it was doing, and was near crying out in sheer enthusiasm when it was done. Then she saw the face of the chief actor in the red furnace glow; it was the face of the man she was constrained to denounce.

She turned away at the sight, but the harsh voice of the mate called her back. There was trouble afoot for the rescuer; who was facing the mate and trying to explain.

(To Be Continued.)

KNEW HE WAS FROM TEXAS.

New Man in an Office Makes a Break,
That Marks Him as a Lone Star Product.

"An unusually quiet sort of a chap was the new man in the office," said a railroad man recently, relates the Chicago Chronicle, "and, as he didn't seem disposed to take any of us into his confidence, we didn't question him much. A slight southern flavor in what little he had to say led us to believe that he was from down that way somewhere, but we curbed our curiosity as to where he came from, at least as far as he was concerned, and took it out in speculating on it among ourselves. One day, when we were all digging into things on our desks, the tire on a bicycle in the rack outside burst with the report most of us were familiar with. Up jumps the new man, and, rushing toward the door excitedly, shouts:

"Somebody's shot!"

When we told him what it was, and quieted him down, I walked over to his desk and asked:

"What part of Texas did you come from, sir?"

"Belmont," he said. "What made you think I came from Texas?"

The Composer.

Composers on newspapers have to run up against fearful and wonderful orthography that will slip into their domain despite the argus eye of the editors; and choreographer, blunt and chunky, "fine Italian" and the "low Dutch" and all the gradations between, make them a tired lot.

Sometimes they are provoking—for instance, when it was reported in the press dispatches some time ago that a train ran into a cow and "cut it into calves." William J. Bryan was once described as the "spout" of his party when "spirit" had been the compliment intended. As these errors have some wit in them, one naturally concludes that the wily composer knew better, but couldn't resist the fun and a chuckle in his own sleeve.

But it was too, too much, when a New York paper announced recently that Miss — wore, in addition, of course, to other apparel, a "magnificent job lot of sable." "Jahot" was the feature meant.—Detroit Free Press.

Gave Them Their Names.

Some years ago a good story was told, in which Prince Munster was concerned. He (then only a count), together with Count Beust and Count Schouvaloff, was attending a foreign office reception in London. Their names afforded no slight difficulty to the thoroughly English footman, who announced the guests by shouting their names up the great staircase. Count Schouvaloff arrived first, and the footman duly announced him as "Count Shuffeloff." Then came Count Beust, whose name in the servant's mouth became "Count Beast." Lastly, Count Munster appeared, and the footman, evidently feeling that a supreme effort was required, finished off by calling out "Count Monster."—London Globe.

Natural to Him.

"Your husband," said Mrs. Oldcastle, as she again availed herself of the privilege of inspecting the splendid library of the new neighbors, "seems to have a particularly fine taste for articles of vertu."

"Yes," her hostess replied, "I know it. But then it's only natural he should have. Josiah's one of the virtuous persons—for a man that I ever seen."—Chicago Record Herald.

HUMOROUS.

She—"They say her father has spent $5,000 on her voice." He—"It needed every cent of it."—Indianapolis News.

Mrs. Harlemit—"Twenty-five cents for that bit of ice! Isn't that awfully dear?" Ice-man—"No, mum, the water in the lake was very high when that ice was cut."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"You don't even know how to make a lemon tart," remarked the cooking school girl with fine scorn. "It isn't necessary to make a lemon tart," replied the other. "All the lemons I've ever seen were pretty tart already."—Philadelphia Record.

Queer—"Yes, I still have the first dollar I ever made," said the gray-haired passenger. "The idea!" exclaimed the traveling acquaintance, "and how did you keep it so long?" "It was very imperfect, being my first, and I'd have had trouble in passing it."—Philadelphia Press.

"I suppose," said Mr. Olds, "if I were to start smoking again it would set the children a bad example." "It would, indeed," replied his wife. "It's very thoughtful and unselfish in you to consider that." "Yes, so I've decided to send the children right off to boarding school where they won't see me."—Philadelphia Press.

"I think Miss Sharp is particularly happy in the use of terms in her references to literature." "What does she say?" "She says she has dipped into this, pored over that and dabbled in the other, until she is fairly saturated with the literature of to-day." "What has she been reading?" "Modern wishy-washy novels."—Indianapolis News.

The Proper Term.—Martha, the colored washerwoman, was complaining of her husband's health to one of her patrons. "He's v'ly pol'y ma'am; v'ly pol'y. He's got dat exclamatory rheumatism." "You mean inflammatory, Martha. Exclamatory is from exclaim, which means to cry out." "Yes, miss," answered Martha, with conviction, "dat's what it is. He hollers all de time."—Christian Register.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

Once Called Goring House and Only by Chance Came to Be the Residence of Royalty.

Buckingham palace is to-day one of London's most comfortable mansions. Extensive alterations were carried out at the beginning of the year, and the private apartments were completely modernized. His majesty's suite of rooms is situated in the right wing, looking on to the gardens, which, as everyone knows, run up Constitution Hill, says the London Express. They are 40 acres in extent; a particular feature of them is the lake, covering no less than five acres. There are boats on it, and at royal garden parties they are manned by the royal watermen in their state liveries for the pleasure of any of the guests who may care for a row.

The gardens are beautifully laid out, and are well wooded. The prospect from the king's apartments does not in the slightest suggest that the palace lies in the very heart of the metropolis, girt by a belt of brick and mortar from half a dozen to a dozen miles in breadth. It was only by chance that Buckingham palace ever became a royal residence. It occupies the site of the mulberry gardens laid out by James I. in his unsuccessful attempt to start a silk industry in London. Subsequently these gardens became a public pleasure ground—"a silly place with a wilderness somewhat pretty," according to Pepys—where the fashionable thing to do was to go and eat mulberry tarts.

The house was originally called Goring house; the name was next changed to Arlington house, and when, in 1703, John Sheffield, duke of Buckingham, bought it, it became Buckingham house. The duke of Buckingham demolished the old structure, and built in its place a mansion of red brick. When George III. was looking out for a more commodious house than St. James' palace, Buckingham house happened to be in the market, and he bought it for only £21,000. With the exception of George IV., all the children of George III. were born under its roof.

In 1775 the property was settled by act of parliament on Queen Charlotte, in exchange for Somerset house, and then became known as Queen's house. The old name of Buckingham house was revived when in 1825 the present building was begun by George IV., according to the designs of John Nash. William IV. never cared for it, and so did not live there. It was only in the last reign, when Queen Victoria took up her residence, that the mansion at last came to be styled Buckingham palace. Here in 1840 their first child, the princess royal—Empress Frederick—was born to Queen Victoria and the prince consort, and here also, in the following year, on November 9, was born their second child King Edward VII.

A Kingly Prerogative.

It is not generally known that King Edward since his accession to the throne has become the guardian of the children of the prince and princess of Wales, and of his other grandchildren, over whom he has complete control, the rights of their parents being superseded. This was decided to be law nearly 200 years ago, by a majority of 10 to 2 of the judges. The right was frequently used by the Georges, who had a habit of quarreling with their sons. Before members of the royal family can marry they will have to obtain King Edward's consent, or the marriage is void. George III. managed to secure this power by means of the royal marriage act, in consequence of his brothers warring subjects, to his great annoyance.—London Tit Bits.

ALL the gas companies of Chicago and Cook county have been trustified.

SOMEbody who has been investigating the subject, states that there are only a dozen multi-millionaires in the Senate.

The Summer resort and seaside vacation days are drawing to a close and soon the over-worked individual will be planning for his next year's outing.

If you burn anthracite coal this winter, you must also have money to burn, as the price of the black diamond will not be within the reach of many.

The suggestion that the trusts be placed in the hands of the Federal Courts is rendered valueless by the circumstance that the Federal Courts are apparently in the hands of the trusts.

It is proposed that there be held a reunion of the Smiths at the World's Fair to be held at St. Louis. We are not informed as to whether it will be a gathering of white Smiths or black-smiths.

The Elks are to be congratulated upon their determination not to stand sponsor for any more street fairs. Such fairs, when freed from the thimble-rig and catch penny games that are sometimes permitted, are a legitimate means of bringing a crowd to town and may be employed by the merchants as an aid to their business, but they are not liable to reflect credit upon a social and fraternal order like the Elks—Commoner.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT.—The Cynthiana Democrat, says: "THE BOURBON NEWS is giving Paris merchants something to think about. A number of these merchants have been running to Lexington when they wanted a little job printing done, but now they are squealing like stuck pigs because the proposed building of the electric railway may take to Lexington people who want a little groceries, dry goods and other things. It is a poor rule that does not work the way you like it, and THE NEWS is rubbing it in. Go for 'em."

Some States, like some men, are born to fame, some achieve fame, and some have fame (or infamy) thrust upon them. Kentucky has more than her fair share of all these, and can both afford and is disposed to be both generous and just. Ohio is entitled to and must bear the equivocal honor of having given birth to the howling wild beast hero of Sunday.

—Although the season for summer gaities has passed, we can hardly say that there is ever a time when there's not "something doing" in the way of small parties, outings on the creek or excursions to the country. Especially among the younger set, the more fortunate ones boast of having an engagement for each evening during the week.

Our city is not large, but we feel that the people are the nicest in the world. There is an air of perfect congeniality existing everywhere this week. We have the Murray Comedy Company every evening at the theatre, besides card parties and dances galore.

—Mrs. Frank Fithian gave an impromptu dance last evening, complimentary to Miss Mary F. Hutchcraft and her guest.

—One of prettiest entertainments given the young people during the summer, was enjoyed on Friday night, Aug. 22d. Miss Mary F. Hutchcraft entertained about ninety young friends at her beautiful home on Second street, in honor of her guests, Misses Betsy Ashbrook, (Cynthiana,) Florence Becraft, (Millersburg,) Nona Smith, (Georgetown,) Mary J. Rogers and Bessie Stone, (Scott county,) and Idella Sparks, (Bourbon county.) The lawn was brilliantly decorated with Chinese lanterns, arc lights and incandescent lights in pairs and sections, also arrayed in the shrubbery. Seats were placed over the lawn tete-a-tete and several large chair swings were also enjoyed. In the receiving line were Miss Hutchcraft and guests of honor, and Mr. Shropshire, of Scott county, who were stationed in the left parlor, which was beautifully decorated in cut flowers. In the right parlor, frappe was served, while an orchestra occupied the rear of the large hall. During the evening progressive conversation and dancing were enjoyed. Between ten o'clock and twelve, an ice course was served in the dining room. The pink and white idea was carried out fully in flowers ices and cakes. The large table was covered in white and had in the center a graceful vase of cut glass containing pink and white roses, while pink and white mints in cut glass platters surrounded this.

—Mrs. Thos. Fisher entertained Thursday evening with a reception and dance for her daughter, Miss Sophia Innes. The lawn was brilliantly illuminated with torches, Japanese lanterns and electric lights. Rustic seats were placed in every nook and corner, while in the house the band played sweet music for the dancers. Miss Sallie Joe Hedges presided at the frappe table and Mesdames James Kerns, Eva Rogers and Ed. Hedges assisted the hostess in receiving and entertaining the guests. THE BOY FROM TOWN.

Let's see a boy come here from town
To stay a week or so,
Because his maw is all run down
And needs a rest, you know.
His name is (well, and he's eight,
And he can't skin the cat—
His maw calls him "Pett" I'd hate
To have a name like that.

He wears a collar and a tie
And can't hang by his toes;
I guess that I would nearly die
If I had on his clo's;
He can't ride bareback, and to-day,
When we sild on the straw,
He ast if roosters help to lay
The eggs I pick for maw.

When our old gander hissed he run
As though he thought he'd bite,
And he ain't ever shot a gun
Or had a homemade kite.
He never milked a cow, and he
Can't even drive or swim—
I'd hate to think that he was me,
I'm glad that I ain't him.

He thinks it's lots of fun to pump
And see the water spurt,
But won't climb in the barn, and jump,
For fear of gettin' hurt.
His clo's are othe nice and fine,
His hat's all over curls,
His hands ain't half as big as mine,
He ought to play with girls.

A little while ago when we
Were foolin' in the shed
He suddenly got mad at me,
Because I bumped his head.
There's lots of things that he can't do,
He thinks that sheep'll bite,
And he's afraid of ganders, too;
But he can fight all right.

The Man Who Would Not Be Saved.

BY HENRY OYEN.

AN almost dismantled, forsaken, adobe house stood alone near the edge of the sand-plain in the midst of a world of sand, sun and mountains.

To the east a range of squalid black rocks rose into a precipitous mountain range, striving with their dark forbidding presence to subdue the exuberant gladness of the brilliant sunshine. To the west the monotonous yellow level stretched out like a tawny carpet, to where a slight rise in the land caused it to meet the sky as sharp and distinct as a placid lake meets the sandy beach.

On the side of the shack nearest to the mountain side stood a new freshly-painted army ambulance; a note of modernity interlarded in a world-old symphony of sand, rocks and atmosphere.

Crosswise on the tongue of the vehicle, limp as a half-filled grain bag, lay the form of a man clad in the striped trousers of a private soldier, and near him, in a tangle of gear and harness, lay a pair of the mule team that he had but recently driven.

At first glance it was easily discernible that man and mules were but recently dead from gunshot wounds, and here and there a bullet had torn its way through the sides of the ambulance, ripping off splinters and exposing the white wood beneath the dark paint. On every hand were unmistakable signs of strife.

Within the adobe house Second Lieut. Horton, recently Cadet Horton, of West Point, now stationed at Fort Pratt, was hurriedly making preparations to resist the band of Apaches who swarmed amongst the black rocks and took occasional pot shots at the house, until the officers at Fort Pratt would become alarmed at the non-appearance of the ambulance, and send a force over the trail and rescue him and the girl who was with him.

The devoted mesqueros who squatted behind the rocks were in no haste to rush in and finish the game which they had so securely trapped.

They had two mute witnesses up there among the rocks, two who were just as dead as the private who lay across the ambulance tongue, to testify to the marksmanship of the man in the house, and the rest were in no frame of mind to risk their lives by exposing themselves to his fire. There was much time. There was but one man in the house—and a woman. Long before the troop had arrived from Fort Pratt they could have easily disposed of the man, looted the ambulance and scattered out over their almost untraceable trails among the mountains. And the woman? Well, Sultaneu, their chief, would probably accept her as his share of the loot and add her to his already generous list of wives.

So they crouched closely down behind their shelters, and leisurely satisfied their instincts for long-range shooting.

Horton, quite well aware that the trait of self-preservation—the terrible dislike to be the "first through the breach"—was exceptionally well-developed in the race to which those among the rocks belonged, hoping that by giving them an exhibition of his shooting he might cause them to delay their attack at close quarters until the dark afforded them a cloak, and by that time—well, if the men from Fort Pratt had not put in appearance before then, there would be a vacancy in the line of second lieutenants.

So Horton carefully directed the girl to a corner where the walls appeared strongest and hastily began to cut loop-holes, and organized himself into a garrison of one to fight a score.

The bright sunlight which caused every speck on the mountain side to stand out wonderfully vivid, materially aided him, and after he had found the correct range he managed by carefully shooting at every exposed redskin to force a very wholesome fear into the soul of the enemy.

The girl, entirely inefficient to render any aid, sat silently watching with a wonderful kind of interest the boy who was doing all that man could do to save his life and her own. Occasionally a bullet bored through the mud walls and sent the dry mud flying in their faces, but the range was great and the walls stopped the majority of the bullets.

The hours seemed to come and go, to them; a dozen times Horton had momentarily ceased his fire to listen for the welcome thud of hoofs, and as often was disappointed. It was in reality but an hour before he suddenly discovered that his supply of rifle ammunition had been expended, and that the six charges in his pistol were his only remaining articles of defense. The girl saw this as he discarded the rifle and drew the pistol, and felt her heart sink as she realized the situation. She saw him as he gazed searchingly out over the plain in an effort to discern a bit of friendly blue, and saw the despair which no man can hope to conceal, come into his face and snuff out the bit of hope and dignity brought there by the joy of well fought combat.

Horton carefully examined each precious charge in the pistol, striving to force himself to think calmly; and all the time an unknown voice repeatedly asserted that further resistance was entirely useless. Still, possessed by that wonderful Anglo-Saxon courage which grows more and more rebelliously firm as the fight goes more and more to the enemy, he quietly informed the girl that he had only begun to fight, and by his demeanor attempted to live the lie.

Instantly, however, told the girl that his cheerfulness was entirely assumed, but by neither word nor look did she betray this knowledge.

Silent, not voicing vain regrets, nor weak vindictives, they stood, living for the moments that reeled off with fearful regularity, each fraught with the question of life or death. Occasionally Horton, from force of habit, glanced at his timepiece, and each time he slightly shook his head. The wary Apaches, noting that the white man's terrible rifle was stilled, had stolen down to the last fringe of rocks that offered them protection, and were making visible preparations for a rush. Still, they knew that the blue-shirted cavalymen had an uncomfortable habit of shooting terribly fast and accurate at short range, with the pistol, and so they still hesitated.

Horton, closely watching their every move and carefully weighing every circumstance, reluctantly decided that the time had come to make the girl aware of the hopelessness of their situation.

"It's all up with us now, I'm afraid, Miss Jordan," he said, quietly. "They're getting ready for a rush out there, I see, and when they try that, I'm afraid I won't be able to hold them off. I'll only have time to fire probably a couple of shots, then they'll—"

"I know," she said, quickly, as if the privilege of speech was a relief after the long pulseless wait. "We'll be killed. Well, you'll find that I'm not afraid to die."

The boy became visibly embarrassed.

"Tisn't that," he said, drooping his eyes to the floor. "They won't kill you, you know, Miss Jordan; 'tisn't their style with white women. They'll—they'll let you live; you understand, don't you, Miss Jordan?"

For a moment she did not comprehend, then when the revelation dawned upon her all her composure and self-possession gave way.

"My God, they don't really do that, do they?" she cried.

The boy nodded.

"Oh, it can't be," she said, clasping her hands as the fearfulness of the boy's disclosures grew upon her. "I'd sooner die a hundred times." She stopped suddenly, for her eyes, roaming furtively, had fallen upon the pistol in the boy's hand, the only lethal weapon remaining to them. Her gaze rose steadily to his frank eyes, and for a moment they gazed at each other, each fully cognizant of the other's thoughts. The boy grew sick at heart, for there was a world of pleading in the girl's eyes.

"You will, won't you?" she said, abruptly. "You'll surely spare me the fate of falling into their hands alive." It was a weak little plea, a plea which told of all hope for life departed, and only a wish remaining for decent death.

Horton walked to a loop-hole and scanned the plain in an effort to find one clew upon which to hang a single thread of hope. But nothing new appeared to disturb the never-ending monotony of the landscape. Then the hope died in his breast.

"It shall be as you wish, Miss Jordan," he said simply.

"Thank you," she said. He stooped and reverently placed her hand to his lips. He would have also spoken, for they had come to be very close to each other in this short moment of awful trial, but an unknown odor of sanctity held him in reserve. He held her hand for a moment, then dropped it and turned to the door.

It was a pathetically heroic tableau they presented as they stood there, subdued by the calmness of despair, awaiting the end.

The afternoon sun came slanting in through the rude windows and cast strange, golden lights and dark shadows upon them.

Outside the sun shone on the yellow sand and the black rocks as it had shone from the beginning, and a breath of sun laden breeze coming into the room mocked them with the song that the world was still good to live in.

The girl stood with clasped hands, gazing straight towards from where the fatal bullet would come, perfectly resigned and fearless to meet her God; the boy with bowed head, subdued by the duty imposed upon him, stood facing the door, idly rolling the cylinder of the revolver between his thumb and finger, waiting, waiting.

When the first naked braves bounded up to the door with rifles held at ready, he fired twice, quickly, at the foremost, then as more came forward to take the fallen's places, he turned and skillfully shot her through the heart. When he turned to meet his fate Horton feared for a moment that his senses had left him.

The foremost Apache fell a wriggling heap in the doorway as if struck down by a swift and powerful hand, and almost simultaneously one more fell likewise.

It was some seconds afterwards that the rifle reports coming up from the mountain pass where Lieut. Thompson and his troop—traveling towards Fort Pratt—were firing, dismounted, told Horton that he was saved.

For a moment the new lease of life fairly exhilarated him. Then his eyes fell upon the form of the girl, as she, a white, still heap upon the mud floor, lay beside him.

After all, Thompson and his men were too late. He was not to be saved. The girl was dead, and he had no right—

The first trooper to enter was a lightly-mounted private, and he found them lying almost side by side.

Lieut. Thompson, when he saw them, remarked that there would be two more scores for Horton's company to even up when it came their day to reckon face to face with Sultaneu's mesqueros.—Overland Monthly.

Somewhat Chromatic.

A Virginia reader sends a story told by the late Alban S. Payne ("Nicholas Spicer") as an actual occurrence. It concerned a hard-riding, hard-drinking young Englishman who settled near Linden, that state, in the expressed hope that the rustic surroundings would prove an aid in ridding him of his abnormal thirst. But he clung to his old habits, and soon became a connoisseur in moonshine distillations, rather preferring them, after a time, to those bearing the government stamp.

His face was a mingled purple and sunset-red, the joint product of whisky and an open-air life; and he had nothing of charm apart from his faultless manners to offer the pretty mountain girl who consented to become his wife. One afternoon he was carried home pretty well mused up as the result of a fall. The gravel of the roadside, the green of the grass and the smear from some cuts added to the colorfulness of his countenance; and the young wife, when Dr. Payne arrived, rushed out on the porch, screaming: "O, doctor! doctor! go in to him—quick! He has all the diseases of the rainbow!"—Philadelphia Times.

Don't Hurry.

Any one can hold out a dumb-bell for a few seconds; but in a few more seconds the arm sags; it is only the trained athlete who can endure even to the minute's end. For Hawthorne to hold the people of The Scarlet Letter steadily in focus from November to February, to say nothing of six years' preliminary brooding, is surely more of an artistic feat than to write a short story between Tuesday and Friday. The three years and nine months of unremitting labor devoted to Middlemarch does not in itself afford any criticism of the value of the book; but given George Eliot's brain to begin with, and then concentrate them for that period upon a single theme, and it is no wonder that the result is a masterpiece. "Jan van Eyck was never in a hurry," says Charles Reade of the great Flemish painter in the Cloister and the Hearth. "Jan van Eyck was never in a hurry, and therefore the world will not forget him in a hurry."—Atlantic.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

While their pupils are holiday-making from May 1 to September 1 many of the Swiss cantonal schoolmasters round Zermatt take situations in the hotels as waiters or porters.

A Paris review recently printed a letter written to a French priest, in which Tolstoi declared that there were two professions inconsistent with true Christianity—the military and the priestly.

Mrs. Urquhart Lee, of Chicago, has the distinction of being the only woman in the country teaching parliamentary law. She is the new appointee to the chair of parliamentary law in the University of California.

Among the reminiscences of the class of '02 at Yale is the story of a stout and healthy looking member, who was told by his tutor that "he was better fed than taught." "You teach me; I feed myself," was the retort.

The society, known as the Mission to Seamen, in England, has now 74 mission stations all over the world, and maintains a staff of over 100 paid workers, in addition to a large number of honorary helpers. It provides 105 special churches and institutes for the sole use of sea-going men when ashore. Last year nearly 20,000 services, Bible readings or meetings for prayer were held by the society workers, and were very largely attended.

Among the advanced degrees given by Columbia university at the last commencement none perhaps represented more energy and perseverance than that of master of arts bestowed upon Moses Leonard Frazier. Mr. Frazier is a negro. He is said to be the only one ever graduated from the school of political science of Columbia. He was born in slavery in New Orleans 42 years ago. He chose the business of hairdressing and chiropody and made money.

Bartlett, Young, this year's president of the Yale University Banjo club, is of Chinese parentage, though born in this country. His father, Dr. Young Wing, graduated from Yale in 1854 and later married a Miss Kellogg, member of a prominent Connecticut family and a famous beauty of her day. He lived in Hartford for many years, being on intimate terms with Mark Twain, Charles Dudley Warner and other notable literary persons, and only returned to his native country on the death of his wife a few years ago. At the time of his boy's birth Dr. Young was a special envoy of China in Washington, and therefore the young man is held to be a Chinese, though born in this country.

ITALIAN OF THE ASH DUMP.

Where This Foreigner Gets Fuel for His Fire and Many Articles of Utility.

There is a value to everything, and the Italian is cognizant of the fact, although the value is small. He gathers cinders, wood, rags, bottles, paper, rubber and leather shoes, and old tin cans, all of which have been thrown away by others. Sometimes two or more families unite in making their collections, and disposing of them, forming in a small way a trust or cooperative industry, says the Christian Endeavor World.

The coal and wood they utilize for fuel in their homes, and turn the other products of their labor into money in the following way:

The old shoes and rubbers are sold to a shoemaker, usually another Italian, and bring from five to 25 cents a pair, the prices varying according to their condition. The shoemaker repairs them, and disposes of them again as secondhand.

The rags and paper are sold to the wholesale junk dealer and usually bring about six cents a hundred-weight for old paper and anywhere from ten to 50 cents a hundredweight for rags.

The bottles are washed and disposed of through the same agency. The price of bottles fluctuates, an average being one dollar a hundred; but the Italian seldom sells on a "bear" market.

The bones are sold to the fertilizer factories, two dollars a ton being paid. The tin cans are sold to foundries, where the solder and tin are melted off and the iron sheets are melted up and sash weights made from them. Old tomato cans and fruit cans bring three dollars a ton, and it takes more than 4,000 of these cans to make a ton.

There must be some money made in this business, for an Italian residing in New York city pays to that corporation the sum of $30,000 a year for the privilege of picking the above mentioned commodities (trimming, they call it) from the sewers that bear the city's ashes and garbage to the sea.

Meaning of a Red Sunset.

A red sunset is hailed with delight by people who are going to take a holiday the next day. But the reason why a red sunset should indicate fine weather the next day is probably considered by few. It is very simple. Watery vapor in the air affects the refraction of the light, and where there is a large amount present it largely cuts off the red rays. When, therefore, the red rays are freely transmitted, the amount of moisture does not approach the rain point, and therefore the chances are strong that the weather will be fine during the next 24 hours.—Chicago Chronicle.

NEBRASKA THE LAND OF PLENTY

I wonder why it is that so many men spend their days working hard on rented farms, barely making enough to get along, with no great prospect ahead of owning their own homes, when within a few hours' journey is a land of plenty—Nebraska—where all kinds of grain and fruit can be raised with the least amount of labor; where cattle and hogs fed on corn bring a handsome profit; where the climate is healthful and churches and schools abound; where land is cheap and can be bought on very easy terms.

Think of this, and if you want information about the country send to me for "The Corn Belt," a beautifully illustrated monthly paper that tells all about Nebraska, and also for "The West Nebraska Grazing Country," an interesting illustrated booklet containing a large sectional map of Nebraska.

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month during the balance of this year cheap excursion tickets will be sold over our road to Nebraska, so that people may go and see for themselves. Ask your ticket agent about this.

Brooks came to the office the other morning with a cigar ten inches long and thick in proportion in his mouth. "For the love of heaven, old boy," said Rivers, "what are you smoking such a thing as that for?" "I'm doing it," responded Brooks, "by the advice of my doctor. He ordered me to smoke just one cigar a day, and I never disobey the doctor. I have a hundred of this size made to order and I use one every day—but it keeps me pretty busy."—Chicago Tribune.

All He Wanted to Know.
"My dear," he said, softly.
"Well?" she returned with some asperity.
"There is just one thing I desire to know in order to be contented with my lot."
"What is it?" she asked.
"Will you hold me up as a model to your third husband as you now hold your first husband up to me?"—Chicago Post.

Mysterious Mixture.
One day a gentleman entered a restaurant and ordered a plate of soup. When the waiter brought it the gentleman doubtfully looked at the soup for a moment, and then asked the waiter what it was.
"It's bean soup, sir," replied the waiter.
"I know it has been soup," said the gentleman, "but what is it now?"—Tit-Bits.

Simply Impossible.

Arguing for Delay.
"Kiss the Book," said the judge, as the lady got into the witness chair.

Slightly Perplexed.
"Lately," said the wife, "John has taken to kissing me without fail every morning before he goes to work, booh-hoo!"
"What's the matter?" asked the mother; "I think he is a very considerate man."
"I know," she says, still sobbing, "but I can't—booh-hoo—make up my mind whether he is kissing because he loves me more, or because he is leading a double life, and is trying to cover up his tracks, booh-hoo!"—Baltimore Herald.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

A Variety of Suggestions and Information for the Benefit of Female Readers.

Onions are a preventive and often-times a cure for malarial fever. Don't moisten your food with the idea of saving your teeth. It spoils the teeth and you will soon lose them, says the Chicago Daily News.

Don't keep the sun out of your living and sleeping rooms. Sunlight is absolutely necessary for a right condition of the atmosphere that we breathe and for our bodily well-being.

There are some skins to which local-ly applied fat of any kind acts as an irritant. I am not referring to cases of oily seborrhea. Quite often, when the skin is not greasy, fat gives rise to a crop of red, itching spots.

Those who have their hands roughened will find them greatly improved by using an oatmeal ball, made by washing half a pound of lard thoroughly, then putting it in a basin and mixing it with fine oatmeal, until no greasiness be felt. If used regularly it is said to be very successful in restoring the hands to a soft condition.

Tender feet are often made so by the use of much-darned stockings. Wear light woolen stockings and let them be of the cheap kind, that you will not mind discarding directly they become worn. To harden the skin it is a good plan to rub the soles of the feet with methylated spirits every day or to wash them over with salt water.

When a girl was anemic black currants used to be given her by housewives of the old school because black currants were known to be cures for this condition. The idea was that, as the black currant juice was thick, red-dish in hue and not very unlike blood, it must be a nourisher of that fluid. Though the real reason was unguessed at, the fact remained that the black currants wrought many cures.

It is a mistake to suppose that good candy will hurt children. If given to them just after meals and in reasonable quantities, it is a decided benefit. Children need sugar for heat and easily digested nourishment, and pure candy is a convenient means of giving it to them. Dr. Fothergill, a distinguished London hospital surgeon, has said that molasses taffy, containing both sugar and grease, was an ideal preventive for children of a consumptive tendency.

A SLEEPING CAR TRAGEDY.

There Was a Tremendous Fizz in the Dark Which Awakened the Porter's Suspicion.

"Dear me," said the girl, suddenly, according to the Detroit Free Press, "it was just this time last year when we made that dreadful sleeping car trip and had such horrible adventures because we didn't have a corkscrew."
"Gertrude was half sick; almost had insomnia, and had a malt tonic with her which the doctor said she could take if she was sleepless. After everybody was a-bed in the car, she whispered to me that she couldn't sleep and thought she had better take some tonic—would I hold the glass while she opened the bottle of malt? I held the glass—and kept on holding it. She had forgotten to bring a corkscrew; and was getting the cork out with a penknife. I must stand ready to hold the glass the very minute she got the cork started—or the effervescent stuff would be lost. How I was going to hold it in the proper spot, in a pitch-dark sleeping-car berth, I didn't know; but, at any rate, I felt cheerfully willing to try."
"Here—hold the glass—hold the glass," cried Gertrude. "Oh, pshaw—I'm not quite ready yet."

"Several false alarms like this occurred. I promptly held out the glass—several times—somewhere, in the pitch-dark; and then Gertrude would say: "Pshaw—I can't get this old cork started; why didn't somebody bring a corkscrew."

"Finally, when I was sitting up in the dark, half asleep, holding the glass, and awaiting the signal from Gertrude, she evidently got the cork started without having time to mention it, for there arose a tremendous fizz—all in the dark—and a thick stream of something awfully thick and sticky struck me right in the eyes and trickled down all over my sleeping-car gown. Gertrude's giggle could be heard above the roar of the train. To say that I was angry doesn't describe matters at all. Gertrude managed to grab the glass, and save a little of the tonic; but I got the most of it on myself and the pillows and sheets of the berth.

"In the morning we were terribly afraid to face the porter; but he only said: "You all ladies done had bad luck wid yer beer las' night—you done spit dat beer all ovah de place."

"The tonic did Gertrude's insomnia no good, for she giggled offensively now and then during the night."
Roosevelt Pudding.
One teaspoon granulated sugar and one-half teaspoon butter, creamed together; two egg whites beaten stiff; two-thirds cup sweet milk; one heaped teaspoon baking powder, ten drops almond extract, one and one-half teaspoons sifted flour. Bake in a round loaf; cut in triangles and serve with the following sauce: One teaspoon sugar, one large heaped tablespoon butter and two tablespoons corn starch, creamed together. Turn over boiling water until thickened sufficiently. Currants, dates or broken walnut meats can be added to the pudding if liked.

THE EXPERT.

Personal Practices of the Man Who Can Tell All About How to Succeed in Life.

"Ah, poor fellow!" said the magazine editor, drawing his chair up to the desk after a sad-looking, middle-aged man had shuffled out, relates the Chicago Record-Herald. "I'm glad you gave him something. If I hadn't feared you might regard it as an impertinence, I would have given him a little change myself. What a poor, broken-down looking chap he was. What was his story? The same old thing, I suppose. Lost his job, can't get a chance anywhere else because he's more than 40. Fam-ily on his hands, too, very likely. By George, it's a tough proposition any way you look at it."

"I don't quite understand what you're referring to."
"Why, that poor fellow who was in here just now. I saw you give him some money. It must come mighty hard for one with a vestige of manhood left in him to ask for—"
"Oh, that fellow? He wasn't begging. He's the man who edits our department on 'How to Succeed.' I give him his money in dribbles to make it last through the month. You'll probably see him lying at the bottom of the stairs in happy unconsciousness when you go out."

AN ITALIAN CAPTAIN

Cured by Pe-ru-na of Catarrh of the Stomach After Doctors Failed.

Hon. J. D. Botkin, Congressman from Kansas, Writes an Interesting Letter.

CAPTAIN O. BERTOLOTTO.

Captain O. Bertolotto of the Italian Barque "Lincolles," in a recent letter from the chief office of the Italian Barque Lincolles, Pensacola, Fla., writes: "I have suffered for several years with chronic catarrh of the stomach. The doctors prescribed for me without my receiving the least benefit. Through one of your pamphlets I began the use of Peru-na, and two bottles have entirely cured me. I recommend Peru-na to all my friends."—O. Bertolotto.

In catarrh of the stomach, as well as catarrh of any part of the body, Peru-na is the remedy. As has been often said, if Peru-na will cure catarrh of one part, it will cure catarrh of any other part of the body.

Catarrh is catarrh wherever located, and the remedy that will cure it anywhere will cure it everywhere.

The following letter from Congressman Botkin speaks for itself:
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.:

My Dear Doctor—It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines—Peru-na and Man-lin. I have been afflicted more or less for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation. A residence in Washington has increased these troubles. A few bottles of your medicine have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of them will effect a permanent cure. Peru-na is surely a wonderful remedy for catarrhal affections.—J. D. Botkin.

This is a case of catarrh of the stomach which had run for twenty-five years, according to his statement, and Peru-na has at once come to his relief, promptly accomplishing for him more benefit than he had been able to find in all other remedies during a quarter of a century.

It stands to reason that a man of wealth and influence, like a Congressman of the great United States, has left no ordinary means untried and no stone unturned to find a cure.

If such cures as these do not verify the claim not only that dyspepsia is due to catarrh of the stomach, but also that Peru-na will cure catarrh of the stomach, it is impossible to imagine how any evidence could do so.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem, then let her fortify herself against the insidious consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the disease from the system. Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action, purifies the blood, and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at W. T. Brooks'. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one chronic disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A Good Thing.

German Syrup is the special prescription of Dr. A. Boschee, a celebrated German Physician, and is acknowledged to be one of the most fortunate discoveries in medicine. It quickly cures Coughs, Colds and all Lung troubles of the severest nature, removing, as it does, the cause of the affection and leaving the parts in a strong and healthy condition. It is not an experimental medicine, but has stood the test of years, giving satisfaction in every case, which its rapidly increasing sale every season confirms. Two billion bottles sold annually. Boschee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States in 1868, and is now sold in every town and village in the civilized world. Three doses will relieve any ordinary cough. Price, 75c. A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.

"Something New Under The Sun."

All doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers cause the entire lining of the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD. CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION — "SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once and write full particulars as to your condition and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE".

CANCEROUS
ULCERS

Are in many respects like other ulcers or sores, and this resemblance often proves fatal. Valuable time is lost in fruitless efforts to heal the sore with washes and salves, because the germs of Cancer that are multiplying in the blood and the new Cancer cells which are constantly developing keep up the irritation and discharge, and at last sharp shooting pains announce the approach of the eating and sloughing stage, and a hideous, sickening cancerous sore begins its destructive work.

No ulcer or sore can exist without some predisposing internal cause that has poisoned the blood, and the open discharging ulcer, or the festering sore on the lip, cheek or other part of the body will continue to spread and eat deeper into the flesh unless the blood is purified and the Cancer germs or morbid matter eliminated from the circulation.

S. S. S. cleanses the blood of all decaying effete matter. It has great antipodal and purifying properties that soon destroy the germs and poisons and restore the blood to its natural condition. And when pure blood is carried to the ulcer or sore the healing process begins, the discharge ceases and the place heals over and new skin forms. S. S. S. is a strictly vegetable blood purifier containing no mercury or minerals of any description.

If you have an ulcer or chronic sore of any kind, write us about it, medical advice will cost you nothing. Books on Cancer and other diseases of the blood will be sent free.
